Pineapple, the King of Fruits.

(By John W. White.)

If you have not been in Florida you do not know the pineapple. To see this fruit at perfection you will have to go to Biscayne, and especially the Keys as all the best fruit is grown there. It is known. While very fine pineapples are grown on the mainland, from Miami, south, on the Keys they are grown by the hundreds, thousands, and a higher degree of perfection than in the mainland. They are of themselves one of the wonders of nature, formed by corn insects, and are even more rocky than the mainland; like a mountain, with a skin covering of rich soil, and the top of the mountain only equalled in the tropics. All along the front of these Keys, facing the ocean, is a high beach ridge, back of this ridge, a low beach, until a few feet above tide-water. On the ridge, planter builds his home, surrounded by luxuriant coco plants, and in front of this house is the wharf, with his schooner anchored in the distance from the house. Frequently the road leading from the house to the wharf is lined by rows of cocoanut palms, forming an avenue of trees.

The pineapples growers are nearly all from the Bahama Islands, or at least their ancestors were, and are known in this part of Florida by the name of "Portoricans." For their planting for a star made from the mainland.

The first large amount of pineapples for profit, was that of Benjamin Baker, who planted the first patch of any size in America (about 1860) this was, and his plantation grew fast. His first crop was in 1864.

There are 60,000 farms in Maine all the same rank 85th in population in the United States.

The average number of persons per square mile is 25.7.

Of the 30 cities Portland is the largest, the population of more than 70,000.
